Unit 1 Review Answer Section

COMPLETION
1. ANS: functional requisites REF: page 4
2. ANS: actual nature, desirable nature REF: page 4
3. ANS: physical care of group members addition of new members
4. ANS: affective nurturance REF: page 8
5. ANS: six REF: page 8
6. ANS: hunter-gatherers REF: page 11
7. ANS: they grew their own crops REF: page 13
8. ANS: disciplining women and children harshly REF: page 16
9. ANS: women, children REF: page 16
10. ANS: Functional requisites REF: page 4

MATCHING
11. ANS: B REF: page 4
12. ANS: D REF: page 4
13. ANS: C REF: page 4
14. ANS: A REF: page 4
15. ANS: A REF: page 5 | page 6
16. ANS: C REF: page 5 | page 6
17. ANS: B REF: page 5 | page 6
18. ANS: B REF: page 10 | page 11 | page 13 | page 14 | page 16 | page 20
22. ANS: A REF: page 10 | page 11 | page 13 | page 14 | page 16 | page 20
23. ANS: C REF: page 10 | page 11 | page 13 | page 14 | page 16 | page 20

SHORT ANSWER
24. ANS: It can determine eligibility or ineligibility for benefits and therefore exclude some individuals who might think they are entitled to the benefits. REF: page 5
25. ANS: The family provides a method of protection and other functions that are the basis of the survival of a society. REF: page 5
26. A legal point of view is important because families have legal obligations, and someone who is knowledgeable about legal matters can help to ensure that legal interpretations are made or considered. REF: page 7
27. The socialization of children is an important family function because it teaches them the skills, knowledge, values, and attitudes expected by their society. REF: page 7
28. Larger families were needed to work the land and tend the animals. REF: page 13 | page 14
29. They married later because they worked in their own family homes and were therefore isolated from possible partners. REF: page 14 | page 15
30. In the pre-industrial society, individuals worked in their homes, while in the urban industrial society, work was usually performed in factories in towns and cities. REF: page 14 | page 15 | page 16
31. The birth rate has decreased because many women are working full time and no longer have as much time to raise larger families. Also, technological advances, such as birth control, have given women greater control over when they want to have children. It is also more expensive to raise a family now than in the past. REF: page 20 | page 21
32. Social welfare provides clothing, economic support, food, and more for families that need assistance. Religion and education provide social controls and contribute to the socialization of children and teens. REF: page 7 | page 8