

EXTRAORDINARY

lives start with a great Catholic education.

Shanelle Kaul

News Correspondent

St. Marcellinus Catholic Secondary School

A Self-Directed, Responsible, Lifelong Learner

"My Catholic education helped me develop a strong moral foundation, cultivate critical thinking, and gave me a deep sense of social responsibility. It taught me to lead with truth, justice, and compassion - qualities that are essential to my job as a journalist. Feeling rooted in my multi-faceted faith background has given me the tools to bring integrity and empathy to my reporting - and focus on the people behind the stories."

Lara Finley

Woodworker

St. Martin Catholic Secondary School

A Reflective, Creative and Holistic Thinker

"I am grateful for my Catholic education, with its emphasis on humility and service. I am blessed to have been mentored by such wonderful and talented teachers, who modelled stewardship through compassionate community-building."

Dr. Angela Silveira

Public Health and Preventive Medicine Physician

Holy Name of Mary Catholic Secondary School

A Responsible Citizen

"One of the most important lessons I carry with me from my time at Holy Name of Mary Catholic Secondary School is the power of working together, grounded in Catholic values of community, service, and solidarity. In medicine, whether in a busy hospital, a public health crisis, or a multidisciplinary care team—collaboration is essential to truly serve the health needs of entire populations."

Roman Kaszczij

Head Athletic Therapist

St. Martin Catholic Secondary School

A Caring Family Member

"When I look back on my Catholic education, two major themes stand out: the need for community and the importance of empathy. Both of these were fostered and developed while at Catholic schools and have continued to help with my career on a daily basis."

Dr. Mark Cicero

Radiologist, Engineer and Health Technology Entrepreneur

St. Joseph Catholic Secondary School

A Collaborative Contributor

"My Catholic education at St. Joseph Catholic Secondary School shaped my belief that true innovation must serve the common good. That conviction stays with me as I work at the intersection of medicine and engineering, developing tools that improve health outcomes and access to care in communities around the world."

Amanda Galle

Boxer

Philip Pocock Catholic Secondary School

A Self-Directed, Responsible, Lifelong Learner

"My Catholic education instilled in me the values of discipline, perseverance, and faith—principles that have been my foundation both in and out of the ring. The lessons of humility, resilience, and respect for others not only shaped me into a world champion, but also into a person who approaches life with integrity and purpose. It taught me that true strength lies in character and that with belief, hard work, and a sense of service, greatness can be achieved."